Mooo...., a fine-dining steakhouse, opened up a new space in Boston's Fort Point neighborhood on Tuesday following the success of the eatery's Beacon Hill location. Dubbed "Mooo.... Seaport," the new location is located at 49 Melcher Street.

The restaurant is a venture from Columbus Hospitality Group co-owner and chef Jamie Mammano and co-owner Paul Roiff. Mooo serves "modern steakhouse fare" according to their website.

Mooo.... is currently open for dinner Tuesday through Saturday. It also offers a bar menu and an award-winning wine list.

Mammano left the Four Seasons Hotel Boston kitchen, where he was previously Executive Chef, according to BostonChefs.com. Mammano and his frequent collaborator Paul Roiff then created Mistral, located in the South End along with partner Seth Greenberg. Some of their other collaborations include Teatro, Sorellina, and The Federalist. The Federalist is now known as Mooo....

The same menu will be offered at the new Fort Point offshoot as the original Beacon Hill location.

Some of the “Mooo.... Specials” listed on their menu for lunch and dinner include broiled twin Maine lobster and grilled Atlantic salmon with roasted beet gastrique, herbed “farrato”, and mushrooms.

Pictures of the exterior and interior of the new establishment were shared via Instagram.
